

New Items Report 2014 - Part 2 - Roco, Fleischmann & Brawa

As always, Roco has the most extensive line up of models covering the export countries of Europe. This year, Roco once again announced several new tooling moulds for locomotives and freight cars. Of course, each year, hundreds of items are released, but are mostly repaints and different versions. This is great because if one exercises the patience he/she should in Model Railroading, then eventually you can complete your train consists, whether it be passenger or freight or locomotive, they will eventually come on the market.

In summary, Brawa has launched a very ambitious new tooling campaign. Having once again visited their factory this year, the company is growing quite strongly. They are expanding their factory on their current premises with a brand new building to be started later this year. They have state of the art computerized parts storage centres that are robotically retrieved when a part # is requested. Their quality control centre has been expanded so that every single locomotive unit is unpackaged, visually checked and then tested, followed by careful repackaging, (of course once approved). So, growing from a once small manufacturer of only lights, funiculars and small accessories, Brawa has positioned itself well into the industry and has been recognized as a top producer of high quality models. If you have never experienced a Brawa locomotive, coach or freight car, no matter what scale, you will be very pleased with what you receive. As a Brawa Specialist Partner, we can service all your Brawa wants and needs.
